 National Institute of Open Schooling

PROJECT 'HUNAR' launched in DELHI

As a part of its endeavour to promote school education amongst disadvantaged communities, the National Institute of Open Schooling (NIOS) launched the 'HUNAR' project for Skill Development and Training of Girls in Delhi on 26th February 2011. The programme was inaugurated by Sri Kapil Sibal, Union Minister for Human Resource Development, Govt. of India in the presence of Smt. Sheila Dixit, Chief Minister, Delhi and Sri Haroon Yusuf, Minister of Food and Civil Supplies and Power, Delhi Govt. at the Delhi Municipal Corporation School Building, Near Delhi Police Bhawan, Asaf Ali Road, Delhi-110006.

A Handbook for Teachers of the HUNAR Project and a HUNAR folder were also launched on the occasion.

HUNAR is a unique and significant project conceived by the NIOS with far reaching ramifications in terms of creation of an education delivery mechanism which is entirely community based and directed towards all round empowerment of disadvantaged girls in the 14+ age group. Also keeping in view the importance of the socio- religious dimension of educational access for the target group, this project aims to provide skill development and training which is easily accessible and community based.

Speaking on the occasion, and referring to the demand in today's society for vocational courses such as bakery and confectionery, beautician etc., Sri. Kapil Sibal mentioned that about 500 learners had already enrolled through 20 centres in the HUNAR project in the old city area of Delhi. He expressed the hope that the HUNAR programme which would soon be extended to all the Madarsas will emerge successful.

Release of Hunar Folder

Appreciating the efforts taken in launching the HUNAR project and speaking in the context of the importance of skill training to empower girls, Smt. Sheila Dixit made reference to the Gender Resource Centres in the name of Stree Shakti which imparted training in vocational areas such as tailoring, cutting, computers etc.

Congratulating Sri. Kapil Sibal for launching the HUNAR initiative in Delhi, Sri Haroon Yusuf assured that all efforts would be made to spread awareness about the project in Delhi.

Earlier, in his welcome address, Sri. S.S. Jena, Chairman, NIOS referred to HUNAR as a small initiative to target the 550 million learners below the age of 25 for imparting education and skill development. He appealed to the Chief Minister of Delhi to integrate the HUNAR scheme with the other social development programmes launched in Delhi.

While academic and technical support would be provided by the NIOS, the community based training centres will provide infrastructural facilities and facilitate training activities. On successful completion of the course, the NIOS will issue the certificate to the successful candidates,

Inaugural address being delivered by Sh. Kapil Sibal, Union Minister for HRD, Govt. of India

The HUNAR programme has earlier been successfully launched in two phases in the State of Bihar by extending skill education and training through Madarsas and nodal agencies situated at the district level. In its first phase, 10134 Muslim girls were certified in the examination. In the second phase of HUNAR in Bihar, 50,000 girls belonging to the Muslim Community and other backward classes have been targeted.

Sri.G.G.Saxena, Secretary, NIOS proposed a vote of thanks.

NIOS Flexibility enables Career Progression

A drop out at the Senior Secondary level which he owes to the subject of mathematics, Charles Thomas Correya completed the Senior Secondary Course of NIOS in humanities. This enabled him to join the MG University in Kerala for a BA course. Having simultaneously completed a certificate course in Electronics, Charles is now employed as an engineer with Birla Sunlife. Equipped with both Academic & Vocational skills, he now wishes to pursue an MBA Programme and also upgrade his technical qualification through different online certification programmes.

He strongly believes that flexibility in NIOS courses and programmes has contributed in the progression of his career.

NIOS wishes him luck in all his future endeavours!
